Judge Lindeman, of Cincinnati, sentenced a little boy to six years' imprisonment for stealing a newspaper from a doorman. The lad's mother was thereby made insane, and the magistrate is the object of popular indignation.

The ancient kingdom of Poland is now for all purposes an integral part of the Russian empire. The last remaining vestige of its semi-autonomous character having been swept away through the recent abolition of the office of secretary of state for Poland.

A lady (the Countess Hadick) has been received in a Hungarian lodge Freemasons. The grand officer of Hungary declares the election null and void. But then comes in the lodge, "once a mason, always a mason." Masonic cases are asking, "what is to be done—how long will the masonic secret be kept now?"

Old Catholics in Europe are still hammering away at the question of marriage for their priesthood. They have recently held a congress at Breslau, at which it was concluded that the explanation as to whether any obstacles existed on the part of the state to the abolition of clerical celibacy, and to take a vote of priests—Old Catholics and congregations on the subject.

The new Thames tunnel chiefly intended for the use of laboring men who have to cross the river at that point, and are often detained by fogs and the consequent stoppage of the boats. It will be for pedestrians only, will be lighted with gas and thoroughly ventilated, and when finished will be a circular tube of nine feet in diameter. There are in all about eight thousand workmen who cross in that vicinity.

It is said that, according to calculations recently made, the English coal mines are good yet for eight centuries to come. Mr. Grimes calculated that the maximum production of the mines for all time is 220,000,000 tons. It has now reached 120,000,000, and he assumes that there is enough to last the above length of time, which may remove a great weight from the minds of some people, who were wondering where their coal was coming from for next winter.

A new drink to take the place of gruel or barley water is recommended by the Times of India—"zongee water," or the liquor in which rice has been boiled. This drink has three excellent qualities—it becomes impregnated with the properties of the rice boiled in it, and thus satisfies hunger; it quenches thirst, and is a capital draught in fever attacks, and lastly, when taken warm in bed, "zongee" is good for cold and influenza.

The miraculous draught of fishes in the Columbia river has practically remained the same for many years, and within the last eight years a canning industry has sprung up on its banks, which last year cured and canned 16,000,000 pounds for exportation. The London Times estimates that the catch of Great Britain and Ireland for 1876 was 9,000,000 pounds, according to that calculation the produce of one Oregon river is equal to nearly four times the catch of the whole United Kingdom.

Mrs. Orton, president of the Western Union telegraph company, says that Chicago gives as much trouble as London. She is a Philadelphia and Boston combined, and that before the close of the present century Chicago will be the second city on this continent. Speaking in the first person, Mrs. Orton says: "Neither St. Louis nor Cincinnati understand the use of lightning rods, and business like the Chicago people. I look with a sanguine mind on the prospects of Chicago, St. Paul, and, I will add, Denver, Colorado. Denver, although a small place, has a vigorous business spirit, and seems to me to be the entrepot for all the Rocky Mountain trade in furs, herds, and agriculture. I regard Denver as one of the future very large cities."

VIENNA correspondence supplies the following information relative to German currency movements: At the end of August, the old silver coins withdrawn amounted to 561,411,210 marks, the old copper coins to 2,969,783 marks. CAST-IRON car-wheels are the subject of a controversy between the Swiss railroad companies. One company has recently begun to use them under their freight cars; the other refuses to permit cars with such wheels to pass over its line, condemning them as unsafe, to the great disadvantage of through traffic from the connecting road. An appeal was made to the Swiss railroad department, and that body has referred it to the council of the confederacy. In the arguments made so far we have seen no mention of the fact that cast iron wheels are used almost exclusively for passenger as well as freight trains, on seventy-five thousand miles of American railroads, and that accidents from wheel breakage are decidedly rare.

A colored man in Virginia was walking one morning before breakfast, and discovered a fawn lying asleep near a spring. Softly approaching he seized it, and hoisting it on his shoulder, started for home. But the fawn set upon a pitiless beating, and the tables were very unexpectedly reversed by the appearance of a very formidable buck, followed by a doe, the first of which charged to the rescue so suddenly that he abstracting a portion of the colored gentleman's coat as he was tumblingly ascended a tree. Then the enraged animal watched for two hours under that tree, but at the end of that time went away, and the man descended safely and skipped homeward.

CHILDREN.

Come to me, O ye children,
For I have a reward for you.
And the questions that perplexed me
Have vanished quite away.

Ye open the eastern windows,
That look toward the sun,
Where thoughts are rising and falling,
And the breeze is moving on.

In your hearts the birds and the sunbirds,
The light and the shadow and the sun,
But in mine is the light and the sun,
And the first and the last.

Ah! what would the world be to us
If the children were no more?
We should dream the dream behind us,
Worse than the dark before.

What the leaves do for the forest,
What the light and the shadow do,
For the heart and the soul,
And the first and the last.

Ye are better than all the birds,
That ever were or shall be,
For you are the living power,
And all the rest are dead.

PHILLIPS' LITTLE CONFIDENCE WOMAN.

BY ELIZABETH CAMPBELL.

It was a warm, sweet day in early summer. Mrs. Anderson, her nursery governess, and two youngest children, Harry and Victor, were out walking. Master Victor soon grew tired, and conducted himself in a cross and irritable manner, which made his governess feel uncomfortable and his mamma provoked. He was only four years old, so his conduct was not altogether forgivable; and presently his mamma said:

"Miss Maylie, you had better take him home. It has grown very warm, and the walk has tired him."

"But I'm not tired, mamma," said Harry. "I needn't go home, I would like to go on with you."

"Very well, dear, if you are a very good boy you shall do so. Here comes a car. We will see Victor safe in first, and then you shall go with mamma."

So the party stood on the corner of Sixth avenue and Fourteenth street, till the cross-town car going east came along and halted.

"Have you got your purse, Miss Maylie?" asked Mrs. Anderson at the last moment. "You haven't? That's just like you! There's your fare, and be quick!"

So Miss Maylie received her fare—two one-cent pieces and a three-cent piece—and dropped it into the pocket of her jacket, while she caught up Victor in her arms, and hastened into the car with him. He was a heavy boy, and she was a very slight and delicate girl; she was glad to rest a moment after she entered the car. But presently the conductor rang for his fare, and Miss Maylie dived into her pocket for it, but with a most unexpected result. Her hand went right through her pocket, and found neither purse nor half penny; her fare was lost! Well, it was a matter of no great consequence, if only master Victor could be persuaded to regard it in that light.

"Come, darling," said Miss Maylie. "We must get out again—I've lost my fare."

But "darling," who had established herself in an open window, and was enjoying the prospect, immediately clapped her hands to her eyes, and said:

"Oh, dear, what shall I do?" thought the little nursery governess. "I ought never to have carried him screaming through the streets," and she jumped up and searched her pockets for the lost fare, but it had only dropped on to the seat.

"Never mind, darling!" she said. "I've found it."

Master Victor's face cleared instantaneously and the sun shone on her face, as she thought; but to her dismay there were but three cents—the two pennies were gone. Absurd and trifling as the loss was, the girl was in despair. She couldn't tell Victor again that he must lose his ride just after raising fresh hopes, and she couldn't tell her mamma of her present and her difficulties. The conductor rung for his fare a second time, in an impatient and authoritative manner. Miss Maylie, quite desperate, turned to the gentleman.

"Sir," she said, "I will trouble you for two cents."

So the little nursery governess meant to sit, in her usually polite and sweet way:

"May I trouble you, sir, to lend me two pennies, if you please?" but confusion and annoyance had so flurried her, that her request had more the air of a demand than of a request.

The gentleman looked up in amazement, then restraining a disposition to smile, returned gravely:

"Certainly, ma'am," and then produced the two pennies.

Miss Maylie murmured her thanks, and something about not daring to disappoint the child, and then she turned to the impatient conductor, and sunk into her seat beside Victor with a sigh of relief.

Occasionally she stole a glance at the opposite corner, and saw that her visitor was a handsome young gentleman, and again quite absorbed in his newspaper.

But Philip Randall was not so absorbed that he managed to take a comprehensive view of the little maiden, and he thought to himself:

"What rosebud of a girl! Positive, it is a pleasure to look at her. Cuddling little too young—little brother, O, no, she's too young—little brother, I guess. Hello! I should like such a girl as that for a sister of myself."

And then Philip Randall got out as they crossed Broadway; and laughing when he remembered Miss Maylie's demand on his purse, strolled leisurely down the great thoroughfare. He was still smiling and beaming when he met a lady, who immediately inquired why he looked so radiant.

"Why, I've just had an interview with the most charming little confidence-woman!"

"How much has she swindled you out of?"

"Two cents!" cried Philip, with a very laugh, and then related his adventure.

"By the way," said Randall, "shall I take you at my aunt's tonight? I've planned to dine there. I saw Aunt Perry this morning—almost the first person I spoke to after I landed. Of course I had to promise to take my first dinner there after an absence of six years in Europe."

"My dear friend, I shall be there," said Victor, smiling, "although I shall probably be looked on as de trop, now that the heir of the family has returned."

"And you don't, don't take nonsense. I am your aunt's least favorite nephew, and I'm sure I shall be looked on as de trop, now that the heir of the family has returned."

"I don't care if I am, Cousin Annie! and I don't care if I am, Cousin Annie! and I don't care if I am, Cousin Annie!"

"Through father and mother, I should like to know you, my dear!"

"Oh, yes! I can never could whistle, while you were always famous at it. So due to-night as usual."

Philip Randall found his Cousin Annie was handsome and spirited than ever; and observation of the young lady soon assured him that the musty old part of the family tradition had been believed—the maiden was won. But as the maiden's mamma. It had been the dream of Mrs. Anderson's life to make a match between her daughter and her favorite nephew; and so, to avoid making himself obnoxious to either, he had been so careful to give his undivided attention to his little Cousin Harry. The lady had not yet told him, but he was promised a view of that interesting drama; and presently he was gratified, for the nursery governess having come, Harry was left alone with his mamma.

She passed by Philip with a side glance, and a fleeting blush, and her heightened color attracted his attention. He gave her a pointblank look, and took a little Victor and hugged him.

"Oh, my fine fellow, you know me!" he said. "Bless me! It's my little confidence-woman!" thought Philip to himself.

"O, yes!" called out master Victor, with the awful memory of childhood. "I know you—your name is Ellen Pennington."

And then the adventure of the horse-car was related again, and Miss Maylie was glad to hear that the ten cents had disappeared with her two charges, loudly clapping for leave to stay longer with the little Philip, and declaring that she couldn't sleep a wink. Notwithstanding which vociferous declaration, they were glad to see her go, and when the little nursery governess followed them, the visions of the handsome Philip attended her slumbers.

disrespect of asking permission only to fly in the face of a refusal. Say you for me, mamma."

"You are a wicked, headstrong girl, and hope you won't live to repent it. As for you, Miss Maylie, I beg your pardon. Since Annie couldn't have Philip, I'm sure I don't care who has him—just as well you as any one. So take him, and be happy!"

"Thank you, ma'am," said Miss Maylie.

The permission was not very gracious, but Philip's "little confidence-woman" was grateful for small favors.

A MATERIALIZED HOLE.

Scientific American.

Take a sheet of stiff writing paper and apply it to the right eye, and look steadily through it, focusing the eye on any convenient object; keep the left eye open. Now place the left hand, palm upward, edgewise against the side of the paper tube, and about an inch or two above its lower end. The astonishing effect will be produced of a hole, the hole in the middle of the cross section of the tube, made through the left hand. This is the hole in which we propose to materialize another and smaller hole. As we need a genuine aperture, and it would be inconvenient to make one in the left hand, let a sheet of white paper be substituted therefor, and similarly held. Just at the part of the paper where the hole appears, make an opening one-fourth of an inch in diameter. Now stare intently into the tube, and the second hole, defined by its difference of illumination, will be seen floating in the first hole, and yet both will be transparent. The illusion, for of course it is one of those optical pranks our binocular vision plays upon us, is certainly one of the most curious ever devised. Besides, here is the actual hole, clearly visible, and yet there is no solid body to be seen to define its edges. It is not a mere spot of light, because, if a page of print be regarded, the lines within the boundaries of the little hole will not coincide at all with those surrounding it and extending to the edges of the paper.

Each eye, by the introduction of high colors in the way of ornaments will be sparingly used.

Platings of the finer "knives" will be greatly worn this season. They will appear on all kinds of fabrics and be the only preferred trimming for waists and dresses.

Stockings of two contrasting colors, are quite new. One color extends to just above the shoe tops, the other finishes the stocking. Where the colors meet there is some fancy clock work of the lower color.

BOY NATURE.

I have thought that the boy is the only true lover of nature, and that we who make such a deal out of studying and admiring her come very wide of the mark.

"The nonchalance of a boy who is sure of his dinner," says one. "It is the healthy attitude of humanity." The boy is a part of nature, he is an instinctive creature, he is a creature of the future.

Dr. P. R. Langdon, the distinguished London Physician from Brownsville, Tenn., is in Hickman, Ky., and will remain three months at St. Charles hotel, where he will treat all diseases the human system is heir to, both acute and chronic, and he will pay to any unfortunate invalid $1,000 if he fails to cure him. Any person who thinks this man a quack, is mistaken. He is willing to be investigated by any medical faculty on the face of the globe. There is ample opportunity to any afflicted person to obtain $1,000 if he fails to cure them. Consultation free to all. Private rooms for the reception of ladies. Remember the St. Charles hotel. Come early and have your disease told. No hopeless cases undertaken.

DR. P. R. LANGDON, From Kings College, London, England.

How She Got Him.

A pretty widow, whose husband had been dead several years, received a beautiful bouquet the other day. The man that sent it had been lying around her with an earnestness worthy of a dry goods clerk and it was with extra delight she saw her pass his store that evening with the bouquet of flowers in her hand.

"Am so pleased to see you with them," said he, and a thousand little cupid dimples in his smile.

"Yes," she replied, "it was very kind in you; I always knew you liked him; am taking them to his grave."

He took her in good order—[Raleigh Sentinel.]

The Tyranny of Some Medical Laws.

Surely, if there ever was a time in the history of our country, when the latent energies of the people should be aroused, when a bold front should be presented, when the supreme power of the land—the voice of the people—should be brought to bear, it surely is now.

Far out, on the utmost verge of the Despot glowing premises, sits a little monster, attempting, if possible, to arrogate and assume all the power and authority of a Jewish Sanhedrin; and in the swellings of its ignominious and dishonest pride, assumes to sit in judgment on the living, and to condemn the dead and dying ancestors by the means of their relief, administrator on their estates, and that too through the power of their privileged assumptions, without the conventions of any one outside the little ringed monster. Not a single tyrant! We have read of the French Revolution, of the Statute of the French, of John Brown's raid in Virginia, of Salary Grabs, and many other attempts to usurp power from the people, but we have never read of a tyrant like this.

FRIDAY, : : : : NOV. 10, 1876.

HURRA FOR THE ROMANEE!

Boone's Majority from 1,500
to 2,000.

The People are the "Ring."

The scattering returns from this

Congressional District from reliable, though unofficial sources, indicate with certainty the re-election of the Hon.

Andrew R. Boone, by a majority ranging from 1,500 to 2,000.

The county of Fulton gives Boone

a majority of 364.

Hickman county, as telegraphed the Courier yesterday, gives Boone 643 majority.

Graves, Judge Boone's home county, gives him over 1,000 majority.

Callaway gives Turner 1,022, and Boone 817. Turner's majority 205.

Two years ago Turner's majority was

373. Houston received 142 votes in Callaway.

The vote at the Blainville precinct

was a tie between Boone and Turner,

which we understand is a Boone gain.

The news here gives Boone increased majorities in the counties of Cal-

well, Lyon, Crittenden, and about a stand off in Livingston.

The counties of Trigg, Callaway,

Marshall, and Ballard, are only nar-ely reported at this date, owing to want of facilities, but give Turner

heavy majorities—probably not up to his vote two years ago.

TILDEN'S ELECTION.

The Result and Its Meaning.

The election of Saml J. Tilden to the Presidency of the United States

means renewed prosperity to the whole country, and peace, reconciliation and fraternity to the whole people. It means a cleaning out of official corruption and an honest administration of the affairs of the government. It means a restoration of the policies of the government to the principles of the constitution and the honored

tradition of our revolutionary sires.

The Southern people will accept the extended hand of Mr. Tilden as the earnest of a common national brotherhood, and can salute the "old flag"

with the pride of other days, no longer

feeling themselves held as aliens or enemies. We are at home in the house of our fathers. With common pride

we can battle for its sacred folds, claim its protection, or defend it when assailed by foreign or domestic foes.

With renewed pride we come renewed energy, industry, hope, ambition. The Northern people will learn that we are not a race of Kukul assassins,

hating them or our country, murdering negroes, or secretly plotting treason

and waiting an opportunity to wreck

revenge on our Northern brethren.

The poor negro will learn that the Southern people are in truth their friends, and not denigrating for their re-employment or to deprive them of any civil or political rights, as has been charged against us. The Northern people will also learn that the rebel claim business" was the miserable lying of sinking Radical corruptionists. In six months the honest names of the Republican party will earn to Tilden's election was a blessing to them and to the whole people.

The inauguration of Tilden and Hendricks will be the harbinger of peace

on earth and good will to all mankind.

The Democrats will still have a working majority in Congress, though

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

[From the New York Public.]

The improvement in business is no longer a matter of dispute.

1. An actual increase in the aggregate transactions of clearing houses at seven chief cities during the three weeks ending October 21, compared with the corresponding week last year of $38,751,773. Though this increase is less than three per centum, it establishes the fact that transactions exceed those of last fall not only in quantities exchanged, but, in spite of the fall in prices, in values also. In quantities the increase appears to be over

13 per centum.

2. This improvement is greatest in

New York, Philadelphia and Chicago,

the very cities which have the most extensive trade with all parts of the country. At New York, the improvement in mercantile transactions is exceeds the clearing indicate, because dealings in stock during the same three weeks were smaller than during the corresponding weeks last year.

3. Receipts and shipments of grain largely exceed those of last year, the increase in October being over 10 per centum in quantity, and since the opening of the highest standing crops of wheat, or 13 per centum. The daily production of petroleum, though small early in the year, is now larger than at this time in 1875. The movement of the export of that of last year is down 44,000 barrels.

4. Railways returns show an increase of 1,000 loaded cars at Indian apolis last week, a large increase during the week of October 21, and a year of traffic exceeding the capacity of the roads. Earnings thus far reported for October show an increase of over 3 per cent compared with last year, but of about 10 per cent compared with the corresponding week of last year. Foreign trade is healthy rather than large, with a growing balance in favor of this country. The possibility of foreign war stimulates the movement for the purchase of goods

of that cause, the condition of crops

promises an unusual demand.

6. Above all there is no more special excitement. A few hours of wild gambling at Chicago, over the price of wheat, or in this city over the price of gold, sufficed to prove that the brokers would have to do the whole business themselves in any speculative

movement for the purchase of goods

of that cause, the condition of crops

promises an unusual demand.

7. The whole matter looks like the existing struggle of Islam against light and civilization. Of the final result there can be no doubt.
